BIRDLIFE SHOALHAVEN CONSERVATION GOALS & PROCESS

Goals

One of BirdLife Shoalhaven's (BLS) three organisational goals is to "Improve Conservation Outcomes", made up of four sub-goals:

1. provide a local face and voice for BirdLife Australia
2. provide a focus on regional and local conservation matters and advocate for the conservation of birds and their habitats
3. conduct research and conservation programs and participate in BirdLife Australia projects
4. champion local bird conservation causes and groups

Having the capacity to improve conservation outcomes at a national, state, regional and local level is unrealistic. This process aims to balance our limited resources with the ability to achieve our conservation goals meaningfully.

Process

To balance expectations, the BLS Committee has adopted the following process:

- a) BLS will provide a local face and voice for BirdLife Australia conservation activities through its magazine, social media and events.
- b) BLS will deliver regional and local conservation initiatives and advocate for the conservation of birds and their habitats with oversight by the BLS Committee.
- c) New initiatives, including BirdLife Australia projects, can be proposed by any BLS member for approval by the BLS Committee. If approved, the BLS Committee will appoint a project team, agree how the project should be delivered and reported upon, and review on-going progress.
- d) The BLS Committee will endorse local bird conservation causes and groups for promotion through its magazine and social media.
- e) Upon request, the BLS Committee will also consider giving approval to a local group or member to draft submissions on bird conservation issues. This will be done on behalf of BLS under the joint signature of the author, the BLS Conservation Officer and/or President. The author must be a BLS member and they will be named in the submission as the point of contact to respond to any queries. The local group will be provided the BLS letterhead for this purpose. The BLS Conservation Officer and/or President will review and amend the local group's draft, share the draft with the Committee for any feedback over an agreed time period and make the final BLS submission. BLS will also send a copy to the local group's representative.
